In this contest the Democratic party is getting together in harmony, and you ment by yarr action here in this convention to serve notice upon the Republican party that your electors never more again shall answer to the call of Expublicansism in your Electoral College. You have accepted the challenge of the single standard—that dollar of the rich alone, that is scant and daily growing less; you have taken up labor's cause, and advicate that bright and shining silver dollar at 16 to 1 against the world and those that fight against it. (Applause.) You have accepted the challenge of the trusts, combinations and monopiles, and you have taken up labor's cause, and you say to them that you shall not lower the price when the farmer has to sail and raise it when labor has to buy; and we intend to force you find that same open competition that the farmer meets when he sells his grain and the laborer meets when he solls his toil. Not only that, but a in this campaign the Igmocracy has reason to be proud because the courts of this Union, from the Circuit Court of Kentucky to to Supreme Court of this Union, from the Circuit Court of the Ination, have found the cause of Gov. Goebel and the Democracy so just that a partisan court could not overturn it. (Applause.) There was but one lonely dissenter to that opinion in the greatest court of this Union, and that man, Mr. Harlan, was appointed by Rutherford B. Hayes, and presume he learned his leasons of honor and honesty from that Administration. But I saw to you

Bob Taylor's Boys

The happiest thing I ever an are-footed and dirty.
He carried mud between his And freekles on his nose.

And his heart was full of dreams, And his he al was full of schemes, And his pockets were full of string and shings and things. His bills and and he roamed over the bills and he roamed over the bills and yelled because he had a yeller and whooped because had a whoper. At home he wantbeautograt of the bond, fast table and dimer table and supper table; at school he was the Democrat of the play ground and the Republicane of the lunch basket—he wanted every thing in sight. He abborred the bash tab and the Bible, le was a swore enemy to castor oil and civilization. He was evertastingly under the indictment of some high crimes and misdemeanors and always attempting to prove an alibi. His father tried and convicted him for dodging the truth and turned to thim with a frown and said: "My son don't you go to school!" Yes sir. Don't they study the Bible there? Yes sir. Can you tell me what hays about a lie? The boy seratched his heed and looked guilty, but finally eaid: "It says that a lie is a bomination in the sight of the The Lord, and a very present help in the time of need."

Richard Harding Davis's "The Relief of Ladysmith" in the July Scribner's is probably the most brilliant piece of war correspondence since his famous story of the fight at Las Guasimas. He gives a wild impression of the ways of itying, the privations, suffering, and the constant danger in the besieged city, and of the fine spirit of endurance that enabled its defenders to hold out until-the last. He shows, too, how difficult it was for the advancing column under General Buller to make its way through the surrounding hills that offered the Boers an almost impregnable natural defence and describes the sirring scenes attending the entrance into the city of the relief column. The Hustrations are from photographs in the city and of the sower-place. are from photographs in the city and of the country about.
